Farah Fardowsi (Tashkent) concerned the political philosophy of Isma'ili Shiism, which synthesizes the civilizational and integrative development of the Muslim World, Body, Soul and Soul. His philosophy of Isma'ili Shiism is a synthesis of the material and the spiritual, the individual and the collective. The individual polity and only achieve economy with village in the State, have the role of the State in development of the State.

Franklin D'Owrick's Confessions: A Life and Reflections have left an indelible impact on India's public philosophy. A Western publicist, he was a missionary and his reflection was rooted in India's national ethos. He had an insight into the role Indians play in making the world free from conflict, hatred and discrimination. The relevance of his great discourse presented by him is not only evident but also is significantly beyond boundaries of nations.
